Resources Available for Local and State Public Health Officials: Preparing for and Responding to Bombing Events

Background and Summary

Boston health officials are dealing with the immediate aftermath of two bombs that exploded near the finish line of the Boston Marathon on the afternoon of April 15, 2013. CDC offers resources that may help local or state health officials prepare for, respond to, and mitigate the health effects of bombings, and other mass casualty events.

Mass Casualty Event Preparedness and Response

CDC's "Mass Casualty Event Preparedness and Response" website, available at <http://emergency.cdc.gov/masscasualties/index.asp>, is the primary location for resources for the general public and for health professionals. Public health officials can assist in disseminating the following resources to the audiences who need them.

Information for the General Public

The following resources on the "Mass Casualty Event Preparedness and Response" website offer information for the general public about bombings, and injuries and stress associated with mass casualty events:

- "Preparing for a Bombing: A Common Sense Approach," available at http://emergency.cdc.gov/masscasualties/preparingterroristbombing.asp
- "After a Bombing: Health and Safety Information for the General Public," available at http://emergency.cdc.gov/masscasualties/afterbombing.asp
- "Injuries and Mass Casualty Events," available at <http://emergency.cdc.gov/masscasualties/injuriespub.asp>
- "Brain Injuries and Mass Casualty Events," available at <http://emergency.cdc.gov/masscasualties/braininjuriespub.asp>
- "Coping With a Traumatic Event," available at http://emergency.cdc.gov/masscasualties/copingpub.asp

Information for Health Professionals

The following resources on the "Mass Casualty Event Preparedness and Response" website offer information for health professionals about treating injuries and stress in patients affected by mass casualty events, as well as other resources for professionals:

Fact Sheets

- "Blast and Bombing Injuries," available at http://emergency.cdc.gov/masscasualties/blastinjuryfacts.asp
- "Injuries and Mass Casualty Events," available at <http://emergency.cdc.gov/masscasualties/injuriespro.asp>

Coping with Trauma

The effects of a disaster, terrorist attack, or other public health emergency can be long-lasting, and the resulting trauma can affect those not directly impacted by the disaster. CDC’s “Coping with a Disaster or Traumatic Event” web page, available at <http://emergency.cdc.gov/mentalhealth/>, lists resources that provide general strategies for promoting mental health and resilience. These materials were developed by various organizations on the basis of experiences in prior emergencies.

Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA) Disaster Distress Resources

The SAMHSA Disaster Distress Helpline, available at <http://disasterdistress.samhsa.gov/>, provides 24/7, year-round crisis counseling and support for persons experiencing signs of distress as a result of disaster:

- Call 1-800-985-5990
- Call TTY for deaf/hearing impaired 1-800-846-8517
- Text TalkWithUs to 66746

SAMHSA has additional resources on dealing with disaster at the SAMHSA website, <http://disasterdistress.samhsa.gov/>.
